WRITING

My viewpoint on the statement, that people always want more, is that I agree with it and I think that it is because of the nature of the mankind.

To prove my point, let's look into the ancient times, when people used to hoard bigger and bigger animals to have enough meat to feed the family and the tribe. We can correlate that to the modern time. The society wants more attention and money to live their life to the fullest and have impact on the world. Politicians want more land and power to show other countries their dominance. I also wanted to mention that those, who already have the needed funds and equipment are more lost and empty than those who didn't, because when upon achieving their goals and they don't have any idea on what to do next, since they don't have anything to achieve anymore.

To top it all off, people always "hoard the bigger fish" because it's in their nature to do that.
